White Cabinets:

- White cabinets are constructed with no reveal; that is the drawer front extends nearly flush to the sides of the cabinet. Special attention is needed when placing these cabinets against a wall where the door trim casings may prevent drawers from fully opening. A fill strip or different drawer configuration may be necessary.
- The doors, drawer fronts, and headers of these cabinets are medium density fiberboard covered in a durable thermo foil that is thermally glued and vacuum-sealed individually.

Stained Wood Cabinets

- The Eureka style cabinet has a full overlay drawer/door design, see note 1 of the white cabinets above for installing these cabinets near a door opening.
- The natural beauty and distinctive appearance of wood cabinetry is derived from the inherent qualities of wood itself. Trees of the same species are affected differently by the climate and elements required for growth. Variations like grain pattern and color variations, and unique markings such as dark mineral streaks and light wood can be present from cabinet to cabinet and within the same door/drawer front and ARE NOT CONSIDERED DEFECTS. The only thing consistent about wood is that it is inconsistent. Each cabinet is only a small piece of nature's work of art.
